

Contents

Introduction	11
I Early years and rise of the company (1886–1932) (by Johannes Bähr)
1 Robert Bosch – portrait of a founder	19
2 The difficult early years	33
3 The period of rapid growth	42
The irresistible rise of the Bosch magneto	42
The first regional subsidiaries and the conquest of the U.S. market	54
The transition to a large-scale enterprise and the introduction of the eight-hour working day	61
The strike of 1913	68
The company on the eve of the First World War	73
4 The First World War and its aftermath	79
The war – a turning point	79
Conversion to a stock corporation and establishment of VVB	87
Changing times: Robert Bosch AG and the aftermath of war	91
Organizational development and the evolution of a sense of identity	102
5 The 1926 crisis, and diversification in the Great Depression	114
Causes, course, and repercussions of the great crisis of 1926	114
The restructuring of 1926–27 and the resolution of the crisis	124
Trial and tribulation on the way to the diesel injection pump	130
Building up a presence outside Germany and battling for the U.S. market	135
Between sackings and shorter working weeks: Bosch in the Great Depression	140
Power tools, refrigerators, radios, and gas-fired water heaters: the first phase of diversification and the rise of a conglomerate	145

II Bosch in the Third Reich (1933–1945)

(by Johannes Bähr)

1	The Bosch Group in the economic upswing of National Socialism (1933–1939)	155
	The development of the enterprise and its subsidiaries	155
	The transformation of Robert Bosch AG into a GmbH	166
2	“Corporate community” versus “people’s community”: Bosch, the NSDAP, and the National Socialist regime	169
	Robert Bosch AG after the National Socialist assumption of power	169
	Clashes and compromises with the NSDAP	175
	Between “model company” and “state within the state”: Bosch under wartime totalitarianism	179
3	Bosch and the Jews	183
	Jews and people of Jewish descent at Robert Bosch AG and GmbH	183
	“For the sake of justice and humanity”: how the Bosch circle helped Jews	187
	“Aryanizations”: acquiring equity interests and real estate from Jewish ownership	189
4	Involvement in rearmament and arms production in the Second World War	193
	Bosch and rearmament	193
	Emergence and early years of Dreilinden Maschinenbau GmbH	195
	From Elektro- und Feinmechanische Industrie GmbH to Trillke-Werke GmbH	199
	Concealing operations outside Germany	202
	Integration into Germany’s wartime economy	207
	The last year of the war	213
5	Beyond the bounds of the “Bosch community”: forced labor	218
6	The Bosch circle and resistance to Hitler	236
7	Death and legacy of Robert Bosch	245
	The legacy: a family company – with reservations.	249

III Adaptation and change between economic boom and economic crises (1945–1983)

(by Paul Erker)

1	Reconstruction in the shadow of Allied decartelization policy and disagreements within the company	255
---	---	-----

	Continuities and breaks with the past: the struggle for positions of power within the company	255
	Conflicts with the works council	262
	The constraints of Allied antitrust legislation:
	Bosch and its “deconcentration case” (1947–1952)	264
	On the brink of a growth crisis: sales figures and corporate financing in a period of tumultuous expansion	271
2	From family-run business to foundation-owned company: the long march to a new Bosch constitution	276
	Who decides what the will means? Execution of the will, and the appointment of Robert Bosch Jr. to the board of management (1953–1964)	277
	Robert Bosch Industrietreuhand KG and shareholder structure: further development of corporate governance at Bosch (1965–1982)	302
3	Corporate organization and corporate strategy between economic miracle and oil-price shock	311
	Divisionalization, crisis strategies, and corporate management in the Merkle era	312
	Monopoly of supply versus collective buying power: Bosch and terms of supply in the pre-López era	323
	The challenge of re-entering the U.S. market: stages and problems of the second phase of internationalization	332
	The “greener automobile”: aspects of an environmental history of Bosch	341
4	Between Americanization and Japanization: manufacturing organization and work environment	351
	Manufacturing organization in times of postwar reconstruction, capacity bottlenecks, and labor shortages	351
	Structural adjustment policies, rationalization strategies, and labor conflicts in the 1970s	365
5	The phase of “indiscriminate diversification”: strategic alliances and the move into new areas of business	375
	The Bosch-Siemens alliance in the household-appliances business	376
	The Blaupunkt crisis and attempts to reorganize the German consumer-electronics industry	379
	Strategic investments and political machinations: Bosch, MBB, and restructuring in the arms and aviation industries	383
	Moving into telecommunications technology:
	Bosch and the AEG crisis	386
6	Initial conclusions	393

IV Bosch and the challenges of globalization (1984–2012)

(by Johannes Bähr and Paul Erker)

1	Radical change and continuity in the shadow of economic turbulence (1984–1993)	400
	“Bosch is unstoppable”: the dynamics of growth and a new leadership culture	400
	From ray of hope to quagmire: development of the communications technology business	409
	Bosch in the three major economic regions of the 1980s: Europe – USA – Japan	421
	Kaizen auf schwäbisch: CIP and lean production in Bosch manufacturing	427
	The great clash of 1993	434
	Upheaval at old-established locations: labor relations and labor conflicts	444
2	Into the digital age	452
	Technical strengths: research, development, and innovation	452
	Development and acceptance of electronically controlled gasoline injection	456
	Vehicle dynamics systems and navigation devices	459
3	From restructuring to change: the process of renewal in the 1990s (1993–2003)	469
	Corporate governance and corporate organization	469
	Crisis and reorganization: the automotive technology business sector and the perennial problem with loss-making products	475
	Diesel injection systems and the diesel boom	482
	A fresh phase of diversification: acquisition of Rexroth and Buderus	487
	The rediscovery of values: value-driven and values-based management	494
	Changes in the parallelogram of forces in corporate governance	500
4	Globalization, diversification, and focus on values (2003–2012)	511
	“Driving change forward”: new strategies and trends	511
	“Getting the workforce through the crisis intact”: Bosch in the financial and economic crisis of 2008–2009	524
	“Green Bosch”: growth in renewables, losses in the solar business	531
	The China boom and growing markets in the other BRIC countries	535
	Looking beyond 125 years	541
	Final conclusions	548

Appendix:

Notes	563
Bosch Group headcount and sales revenue (1886–2012)	662
List of abbreviations	666
Photo credits	673
Sources and bibliography	674
Index of persons	693
Index of companies	699