Two Cultures of Rights

THE QUEST FOR INCLUSION AND PARTICIPATION IN MODERN AMERICA AND GERMANY

This collection examines key issues in the history of the struggle for civil rights, political rights, and social rights in the United States and Germany from the late nineteenth century to the present. The book provides a cross-national comparative perspective and presents national case studies that explore the similarities and differences in the conceptualization of rights on both sides of the Atlantic. By examining the different ways that rights have been denied due to race, ethnicity, gender, and sexual orientation, the essays in this volume address vital aspects of the definition of citizenship for women, African Americans, Asian Americans, Jews, resident aliens, and homosexuals. The book demonstrates that these struggles for rights became an essential feature of not only political discourse but also social and political practice and culture in Germany and the United States.

Manfred Berg teaches history in the John F. Kennedy Institute for North American Studies at the Free University of Berlin.

Martin H. Geyer is a professor of history at the University of Munich.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE GERMAN HISTORICAL INSTITUTE
WASHINGTON, D.C.

Edited by Detlef Junker
with the assistance of Daniel S. Mattern

The German Historical Institute is a center for advanced study and research whose purpose is to provide a permanent basis for scholarly cooperation between historians from the Federal Republic of Germany and the United States. The Institute conducts, promotes, and supports research into both American and German political, social, economic, and cultural history, into transatlantic migration, especially in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, and into the history of international relations, with special emphasis on the roles played by the United States and Germany.
