

Table of Contents

Abbreviations	11
I. The research question	15
II. Activation in Europe	19
1. Activation in the EU	19
a) Socio-political orientation of the EU	19
b) The European employment strategy: activation	21
c) The modernisation of social protection through activation	23
2. The Netherlands	27
a) From the “Dutch disease” to the “Dutch miracle”	27
b) The Wassenaar Agreement	28
c) New regulations in the promotion of labour and the provision for invalidity	29
3. Denmark	32
4. United Kingdom	35
a) Lines of tradition	35
b) Margaret Thatcher	40
c) New Labour	44
5. France	49
a) Lines of tradition	49
b) Labour promotion	51
c) Consequences of the activation	53
6. Germany	53
a) Belated reform on the basis of European experiences	53
b) The labour market reform: From support to activation	56
c) From the safeguarding of living standards in the pension insurance towards the three-pillar model of the old age provision	58
d) Healthcare reform under the banner of cost awareness, self-responsibility and integrated care	60
e) Municipal social policy and activation	60
7. Activation – a fundamental feature of current social reforms	64

Table of Contents

III. Foundations of activation – labour and social benefits	68
1. Welfare state of labour	68
a) Lines of tradition	68
b) The mission of the welfare state: securing subsistence in the work-oriented society	70
c) Work precedes social benefits: Work First Welfare State	72
d) Gainful work and family responsibilities	73
e) Social promotion through labour for those able to work and protection for those unfit for work!	75
f) Basic income – an alternative?	80
2. The activation model: not neoliberal but communitarian!	84
a) Social policy and political orientations	84
b) Activation as the lowering of social rights?	90
c) Communitarianism	91
3. Reorganisation of the welfare state through dealing with social benefit cases	95
a) Reorganisation of the welfare state through a requirement for cooperation on the part of the beneficiary	95
b) Activation and the right to work	99
c) The right to work and cooperation duties in social law	103
IV. Self-responsibility	106
1. Individual responsibility and solidarity obligations	106
a) Possibilities of demanding self-responsibility	106
b) Examples of refusals of social benefits claims	107
c) Obligations to act after the contingency has materialised	109
2. Exemption from the obligation to provide benefits in case of self-endangerment?	110
a) Equivalence of self-endangerment and self-destruction?	111
b) What is the central legitimisation of the social law-related exchange of performances?	112
c) Extension of the restriction of benefits to negligent self-endangerment?	114
d) The claim to social benefits and human rights	117
e) Sanctioning and lifestyle	120
3. The social law's potential for abuse and fraud	122

Table of Contents

V.	Social administration bound by statute or by contract?	125
	1. Individual promotion and contract	125
	a) The structure of contracts in the social administration	126
	b) Contract and freedom of contract	128
	c) The notion of contract	130
	2. Contract and the social administration's power under public law	132
	a) Contract and cooperation of benefit recipients and providers	132
	b) Self-commitment and cause of liability	134
	c) Individualisation and equality in social administration	137
	3. Realisation of rights through case management	139
	a) An alternative to bureaucracy without state controls under the rule of law?	139
	b) Development of new prospects of action	139
	c) Case management: concretisation of actions in the legal relationship governed by social law	140
VI.	Sanctions in case of a failure to cooperate	144
	1. Activation and its limits	144
	2. The legal nature of sanctions under social law	145
	a) The right to work and the obligation to integrate into the labour market	145
	b) Sanctions – punishment or disqualification?	147
	c) Sanctioning and assistance	149
	d) The effects of sanctions	150
	3. The rules for sanctions	150
	a) Sanctions and the breach of non-binding duties to act	150
	b) Sanctions in the case of benefits securing one's livelihood	153
	c) Avoiding external effects of sanctions	154
	d) Reductions on a percentage basis or uniform reductions?	155
VII.	The level of the benefits in the activating welfare state	156
	1. The research question	156
	2. Activation and participation as a cooperation relationship	156

Table of Contents

3. Reciprocity and individual contributions to social insurance	157
VIII. Conclusion – the activating welfare state and the law	158
Bibliography	161
Index	173